

Rocco Mimmo

Chairman and Founder of Ambrose Centre for Religious Liberty. The Ambrose Centre was established to defend religious freedom as one of the foundations of human rights and a strong, democratic, and pluralistic society. The Ambrose Centre for Religious Liberty develops public awareness of the importance of this fundamental right to engage in the search for meaning and to live out the answers a person comes to publicly and privately. This is a fundamental right and is enshrined in numerous human rights documents, including the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights.

Rocco Mimmo has a Masters Degree in International Law and has a keen interest in human rights subjects. He studies development in anti-discrimination laws in Australia and the effects on individuals and organizations who wish to manifest their religious beliefs and practices.
