Russia in the Twenty-first Century:
Freedom of Conscience, Religion, and Church

VIII International Scientific Practitioner’s Conference

3-6 August 2009
Saint Petersburg

This conference is sponsored by:

The Center for Religious Study
Russian State Humanitarian University

State Museum on Religious History

Russian Social Organization for the Protection of Freedom of Conscience (MARS)

Youth for Human Rights

International Center for the Study of Rights and Religion (USA)

The religious organizations of our country, together with the government, can do much to avoid a spiritual decline and spreading of pessimistic feelings in society. We should work together to put a stop to all displays of extremism, including acts and propaganda of extremism. We should include youth in intercultural dialogues, in cooperating together, and bring them up in a spirit of tolerance. At the same time, we must help them remember Russian patriotism, which is upheld by interethnic consent in maintaining unity in our multi-confessional society. Practically all of our cooperative efforts depend on this.

From the Speech of Russian President D. A. Medvedev,

12 March, 2009
